MASSACHUSETTS STATE LEGISLATIVE DOCUMENTS
1802-1882

During the nineteenth century, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts experienced an almost complete transformation. The changes which took place during those years touched all aspects of life and segments of society within the state. The population, continually increasing, became in many ways diversified. The mobility of existing population and immigration produced numerous changes in the political, social and intellectual life of the state. Once dependent on agriculture and shipping, the state by 1880 was one of the most industrialized in the nation. The nineteenth century population experienced rapid urbanization as numerous new cities and towns arose throughout the state and population increased in those already in existence. By the 1880's the state seemed much smaller as canals and especially the railroad provided a transportation network which latticed the entire state.

One of the more active participants in this process of change was the Mass. General Court. Though perhaps as much an observer as participant, the General Court, through consideration of various petitions and reports placed before it, left behind a mound of legislative documents regarding various aspects of political, economic, and social life in 19th century Massachusetts. In all more than 15,000 separate pieces of legislation were considered during the years 1802-1882. Most of these documents have remained lost between the covers of the enormous volumes in which the bills and reports are bound. Those which ultimately became acts or resolves could be easily traced, and of course all are referenced, however briefly, in the Journals of the House and Senate. But it has been difficult to locate bills by subject.

This index is a subject guide to all resolves, bills, reports, memorials, petitions, messages, letters and public documents formally considered before sessions of the Massachusetts General Court from 1804-1882. The bills (general term for legislative documents) are listed by year, b branch of legislature within each subject heading. Hence, for example; 62H252 is House bill number 252 for the year 1862 (see list of abbreviations and symbols for special cases). It is important to note that prior to 1831, the legislature held several sessions per legislative year which at that time went from May to May of the following year. Hence there are often several bills of the same number for each year. The researcher is thus advised to search a bit if the first bill consulted bears no resemblance to the subject at hand.

The bills subdivide into two general categories: general bills and reports. Since the reports tend to be more informative, care was taken to describe each report with some indication of content, while limits of space and the number of bills prevented such attention to be given to each individual bill. Bills generally run no more than 3 pages while reports run as large as 150 pages. Some reports which originally were submitted to the General Court as bills later became public documents. For a list of subjects so published, see appendix I.

Bills further subdivide into resolves, petitions, and occasionally, messages and memorials. Messages and memorials are noted while all numbers without special notation should be considered either resolves or petitions.

I wish to acknowledge the assistance of a number of people in the preparation of this index. The project could not have been completed without the constant encouragement of Mr. I. Albert Matkov, State Librarian. As this index goes to press, Mr. Matkov retires from State service and it is hoped that this index will serve as an appreciation for his years of devoted service to one of the State's most distinguished libraries.

The staff of the Massachusetts State Library, both past and present, assisted in a variety of ways, particularly Mr. Michael Galvin, who indexed some of the reports, and Mr. Alan Fox. The present staff provided a pleasant and quiet atmosphere which allowed the work to proceed on schedule. Mr. Leo Flaherty of the State Archives answered many questions. Finally, Mr. Geoffrey Patterson cheerfully accepted the burden of typing a difficult manuscript. It is hoped that in some small way this index will aid scholars and history buffs in the study of the history of a state about which much has been written but about which many questions still remain unanswered.
